If migraine headache always occurred alone...

ergotamine would be enough

The pulsating, vascular head pain of migraine is usually well controlled by early administration of ergotamine. Vasomotor tone returns to the cerebral blood vessels and throbbing subsides. BUT...

A second source of pain, sustained contraction of head and neck muscles, accompanies migraine so frequently that rational treatment of this syndrome and similar vascular headache often requires an analgesic. AND...GI distress, such as hypermotility, nausea and vomiting occur during most attacks, throughout or at the height of the headache.

Look at the unique Wigraine formula. Doesn't it provide the comprehensive treatment you want for your migraine patients?

SYNDROME	TREATMENT
Vascular headache	ergotamine tartrate	1 mg.
	caffeine	100 mg.
Muscle pain	phenacetin	130 mg.
GI distress	l-belladonna alkaloids	0.1 mg.

Wigraine tablets are uncoated, dissolve in seconds. Dosage: 1 or 2 tablets at onset of prodromata or attack; then 1 or 2 every 15 minutes until pain subsides (up to total of 6 tablets per attack). Same dosage for suppositories. Side effects: no serious complications reported in recommended dosage. Contraindications: peripheral vascular or coronary disease, angina pectoris, hypertension, renal or hepatic dysfunction, pregnancy, septic states, incipient glaucoma. Supplied: boxes of 20 and 100 tablets, 12 rectal suppositories.
